

In the name of God most beneficent and merciful

We are grateful to have gathered here with such eminent personalities in this centre for social and educational development; so that the basis and foundation of scientific collaborations in the field of social sciences can be laid amongst two premier institutions like Institute Of Social Sciences and Al-Mustafa International University.

The most important factor in the relationship of two great nations like India and Iran is their common cultures which have gradually taken their present form by progressing together in the passage of history. Even in their interests and cultural relations, Iran and India are close to each other to such an extent that no Iranian national feels that he is in a foreign country when he comes to India and likewise Indians don't see themselves alone in a foreign country while they are in Iran.

One of the finest chapters of our common culture is the similarities present in our languages; which are extremely close to each other and encompass a vast amount of common words and common dialects within itself. The similarities present between two nations are not limited to languages only; rather they go deep inside morals and values as well as numerous similarities in regards to religion and spirituality of two nations.

In such circumstances, utilizing the potential and capabilities present in both the countries, with the aim of closer collaboration and bringing their viewpoints closer to each other can guide us towards a constructive path of progress and advancement.

Al-Mustafa International University currently has more than 25,000 students from various countries enrolled in various programs all over the globe, and with a list of One hundred and Fifty (150) different subjects to offer in the field of Humanities, it is one of the biggest international universities of the world working in field of Humanities and has abundant potential, especially in the field of Social Sciences.

Our goal is to be connected with educational institutions all over the globe and utilize the potential which is present at the international level, for "Knowledge Production" and pursue various projects to provide a better social life and better welfare.

Right now we are present in one such exclusive occasion where by signing a MOU with Institute of Social Sciences and JAM'ATOL Mustafa; representing Al-Mustafa International University, we are hoping to achieve a platform for common educational endeavors regarding various Social Issues. We hope that this valuable effort becomes the basis and foundation of many more scientific and educational activities and collaborations in the future.
